December 2023 Review/Status Update

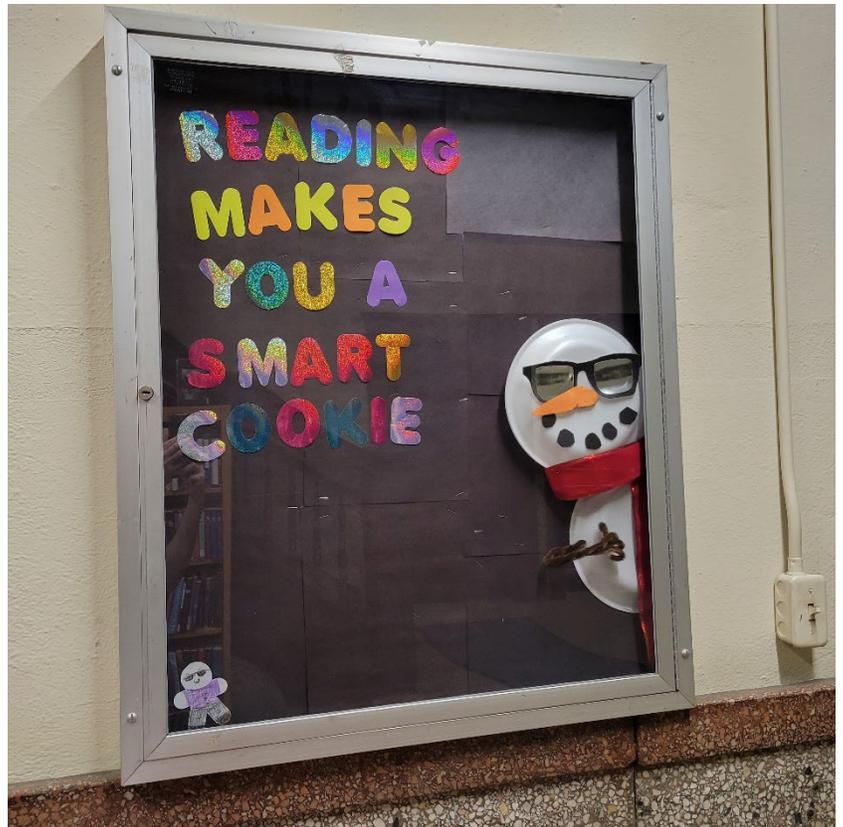

December was a quiet month for the library. Patron traffic dropped as everyone focused more on the holidays than their holiday reading.

Mary Liz Wright did her nutrition program, which brought in four people. Illinois Libraries Presents held two virtual programs in December, Surviving the Holidays with Lori Gottlieb and the Nutcracker Ballet. Surviving the Holidays had no participants, but The Nutcracker had four people from Paris register. It would have been at least one more, but the event only had limited tickets.

Our spine labeling project is making progress. Dori has finished labeling the large print, mystery, and teen books and is halfway through Westerns. Johnstone has slowed her down with his numerous series. Down in the children's department, we continue to work on spine labels and AR stickers. Board books and picture books are finished.

The Friends prepared Santa Sacks again this year. We distributed 118 Santa Sacks, 100 of which had $5 DQ gift cards. One might think the gift cards would be what kids were most excited about, but consistently, it was getting a candy cane.

Storytime continues to fail. Salem and I will need to discuss how to promote the program and any potential issues we see preventing parents from bringing their children to storytime. Salem's passive program for children in December was coloring in a paper gingerbread cookie; we had nine cookies.

January 2024 Review/Status Update

It's a new year, and our resolution at the library is to serve the Paris community even better than last year. Patron traffic picked up again after dropping in December. We started to track our traffic by hour, which has been interesting.

Mary Liz Wright did her nutrition program, which brought in five people. Illinois Libraries Presents held a program with science fiction writers speculating about the future of AI that two people from Paris attended.

Our spine labeling project is making progress. Dori is nearly at the end of the Westerns. Spine and AR labeling in the children's room has progressed, with middle school books now completed.

We scheduled to have three preschool visits to the library. All three were rescheduled due to weather. District 95's Beyond the Bell requested that their students have the opportunity to fill out applications for library cards in advance, which we did. One student from Beyond the Bell lives outside the city limits and could not get a card. I have suggested that Beyond the Bell apply for an institutional card to ensure the child doesn't feel excluded from the library.

Salem and I will promote Story Time by showing the craft the children will be making.

January also saw the launch of two new programs, Learning Crochet, which brought in 24 participants in the first session, and Game Night, or Game Afternoon as I jokingly call it, which brought in 7 participants.

I also submitted our annual Certification and Per Capita Application.
